He found lukewarmness and and when the church is completed it will be a landmark of Catholicism angle formed by the nave and the indifference prevalent in matters spiritual, with a total absence of anything like team work among his new parishioners; and he found for a old church has been moved and will serve as a parish hall in the future. The location of the church building a bare, barnlike structure, its walls unfinished and its interior unfurnished.

Catholics were here at the foundation of the town, and were the first to institute and maintain regular church service.

It was in the spring of 1893 when the late lamented Rev. Father James Cooper came from San Mateo, where he was a curate in that Catholic parish, and celebrated mass in a small frame building at the southeast corner of Miller and Cypress avenues, the building being used on week days as the justice's court room. The old-time Catholics who are now living in this city are: M. F. Healy and his son, Harry; M. Foley and his wife Kate Foley; Mrs. Delia Harrington and her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Sheehan; Mrs. J. Jorgenson and Mrs. E. E. Cunningham.

Rev. Father Cooper said mass in the court room of the justice of the peace, first at the corner above mentioned, and later at the corner of Grand and Linden avenues, until the Souls' parish by the late Archbishop Riordan.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO MONEY FOR SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO

IF you invest your money in securities or lands at a distance from home, our community is deprived of the development that your money might help to bring about.

ONE of the functions of a state bank is the loaning of money on real estate—such loans are always secured by first mortgages.

WHEN these loans are made to develop and improve property in the territory in which they are located, the value of the neighborhood bank to the community in encouraging the development of worthy building enterprises is readily seen.

IN transacting business of this nature and practically confining its real estate loans to local enterprises, a state bank is able to render a service to the community that no national bank can legally participate in.

IF home investments are given preference, above the offerings from the outside, the development of South San Francisco will make surprising progress.

BRIGHT, WHITE LIGHT

DEPENDS

On the QUALITY and VOLTAGE

Of the Lamps Used

If lamps are used which are marked for a voltage higher than the standard current supplied, then they will burn dim, only two-thirds of the proper light being given if the marked lamp voltage is ten per cent above standard.

If lamps are used which are marked for a voltage lower than the standard they will burn out faster than they should.

The standard voltage rating for lamps for use on lines of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in this district is 115 VOLTS.

Expensive automatic regulators are maintained by the company which operate every second of the day and night in order to maintain uniform voltage on the lines.

Unless the lamps used are of the proper voltage the benefits of this costly work are largely lost to the consumers of "Pacific Service."

Be sure when you buy lamps to look at the small paper label and see that it reads 115 VOLTS (sometimes abbreviated to 115V.).

"Tables Turned"

EMMY WEHLEN in "TABLES TURNED"

The next release on the Metro program is "Tables Turned," a five-act photo-drama, produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., and starring Emmy Whelen, the charming and versatile actress. It will be shown at the Royal Theatre on Sunday, April 23d.

The story of "Tables Turned" is, briefly, as follows:

Howard Sherbrooke, a wealthy senior at a law university, is infatuated with Ethel Stratton, a beautiful girl, who is a favorite with the students. Dick Leslie, his chum, is also in love with her. Dick is from the west, working his way through college, and Howard has assisted him financially. Howard does not know of Dick's love for Ethel. After graduation, Howard, whose interest in Ethel has ripened into love, realizes that his family and social friends will not tolerate her as his wife. He plans a mock marriage, intending to take her to New York with him. He tells Dick of this proposed arrangement and asks him to get some one to impersonate a minister for the ceremony. Dick veils his indignation, but agrees to carry out the plan. Instead, he engages a real minister, who marries Ethel and Howard. Dick wishes them well and leaves for the west to practice law.

The couple live happily in a Brooklyn flat for several months, when Howard receives a letter from his father stating that he is planning for his son to marry Beatrice Ford, daughter of his friend, Randolph Ford, a multi-millionaire. He adds that Mr. Ford intends making Howard head of the law department of his firm.

Howard realizes he must break up his affair with Ethel. He tells her he is not married to her and that he must leave to marry a girl of his own class.

Broken hearted, Ethel informs him she is soon to become a mother.

Howard blames the mock marriage on Dick and leaves.

Ethel writes a scathing letter to Dick. Dick hurries east and finds the minister who performed the ceremony. It is the morning of the Sherbrooke-Ford wedding. Ethel goes to the church and as she starts to denounce her husband during the ceremony, she falls in a swoon and is carried into the vestry. Dick and the minister arrive at the church as the guests are leaving. Ethel comes out of the church alone, meets Dick and starts to upbraid him, when he tells her she is really married to Howard.

Accompanied by the minister, they hurry to the Ford home, where they convince the elder Ford that his son is a bigamist. Mr. Ford in a rage declares he will send his son to prison, and he denounces him before all the guests. Horrified at the prospect of a prison term and the attending disgrace, Howard goes into the library, where the flash from a pistol records his unhappy end. A few months later Ethel and Dick are married and go west to make their home.

What Would You Do About It If You Were a Methodist?

The Methodist Episcopal churches of California are organized into a conference.

The conference meets once a year and is composed of delegates from each of the parishes of the state.

At the conferences the delegates consult together and determine the policy to be pursued along general lines by the churches of the state.

Now let us suppose that difference of opinion among the membership has caused a state-wide split in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The church membership is divided into two factions. One of the factions we will call the united Methodists, and the other the regular Methodists.

The united Methodists, we will suppose, with the aid of the Baptists and the Congregationalists, have ousted the regular Methodists and secured control of the affairs of the church.

They are the church party in power.

Some time prior to the annual election of delegates to the conference, the united Methodists enact certain laws that are binding on the entire church membership. These laws make it possible for the Baptists and the Congregationalists to con-

Methodist Church assemble and name a list of candidates for delegates to the Methodist conference in opposition to the list of candidates selected by the FIFTY United Methodists.

Now, then,

Substitute United Republicans and regular republicans for "United Methodists" and "regular Methodists," and progressives and democrats for "Baptists" and "Congregationalists," and you have in the foregoing a parallel for the political situation that exists in this state to-day.

If the problem to be solved by the voters at the primary election on the second day of May related to the foregoing supposed split in the Methodist Church, would the action of the United Methodists, in making it possible for the members of ALL churches to go to the polls and vote a Methodist ticket, meet with your approval?

In such case which ticket would deserve to win, the ticket named by the fifty United Methodists or the ticket named by EIGHT HUNDRED duly elected, lawful representatives of the Methodist Church?

If it were proven that the United Methodists' movement had failed; that the United Methodists had either to return to the parent church or cease to be Methodists at all; if it were definitely certain that the United Methodists were using every despicable trick known to the legal mind to enable them to get back into the Methodist Church as MASTERS rather than as workers in the vineyard; if these things were true, and they ARE true of the United Republicans, what would you do about it—if you were a Methodist?

We trust we have offended no one in using the churches to illustrate the point we want to make clear.

We do so in the hope that some voters who are not versed in politics might gain a better understanding of what this paper is fighting for—what California republicans are fighting for—the right to sit down in conference fellow republicans from other states in the union and outline the course the party shall pursue in the trying days that lie just beyond the horizon.—Petaluma Argus.

OPPORTUNITY OR YOU.

Some people are always waiting for opportunity to take them by the hand. It never does, and it never will.

Opportunity is ever present with us, it is by our side, it dogs our steps, it never leaves us. But it never reaches out its hand. We must do the reaching, the grasping, the improving.

Don't sit still and wait for opportunity to come to you. Go out and hunt it, and hunt it till you find it. It is flirting with you every day in the year, every hour of the day.

One of your greatest opportunities lies in what you may accomplish in aid of your home town, for what is good for the town is even better for you. If you want your town to do something for you, you should first do something for the town. Opportunity believes in that, and greets the one who does it.

Don't expect to receive everything and give nothing. Opportunity does not approve of that, will not sanction it, will not lend its aid and encouragement. Only fools expect that, and fools seldom step beyond the shadow of their own foolishness.

The wise man makes his own opportunity, and that begets other and greater opportunity, and they breed success.

Your future is not up to opportunity—it is up to you.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

What, think you, do other people say of this town? It's up to us.

All roads lead somewhere, but with many the road to success begins and ends in a blind trail.

No trouble at all to get a reputation these days. All you have to do is to be a wise one or a d. f.

All women are beautiful. Some, however, are more so than others—including yours, and ours.

The road to success, Algernon, is paved with hard knocks and lined with the stings of adversity. Get up, go to it, and hump yourself.

REPUBLICAN EDITORS HAVE CONFERENCE

That the progressives of California are attempting to send two delegates to Chicago, one to their own national convention and the other to the republican national convention was the assertion of J. O. Hayes of the San Jose Mercury-Herald and Joseph R. Knowland of the Oakland Tribune during the conference of the regular republican editors in San Francisco last Saturday.

Full discussion of the presidential primary campaign was had by the editors, and the consensus of opinion was that an effort should be made to check Hiram Johnson, Guy C. Earl and other progressives, whether professed members of their own party, or masquerading under the misnomer of "united" republicans, from their unholly interference in the affairs of the republican party.

"If we had a pure food law in California that applied to tickets as it does to packages," said Mr. Knowland, "I believe we could get out an injunction restraining the Earl faction because they are falsely labeled."

It was reported by the newspaper men that there is some apathy throughout the northern part of the state, but from the earnestness being displayed by these representative publishers it is expected that the voters will be aroused to a full appreciation of the menace that is confronting them in the shape of the new Johnson-Earl "hydro-electric" political organization that is about to be substituted for the Southern Pacific machine which was retired from political activities a few years ago.

Francis V. Keesling, chairman of the republican state central committee, asserted that the perverted direct primary law foisted on the state by Hiram Johnson was responsible for many of the evils of the present campaign. He spoke of the bad faith of Earl and added that the so-called "united" ticket was simply in the field for Johnson's advancement.

In addition to Messrs. Hayes and Keesling, the other candidates for delegates to the national convention who addressed the gathering were: Pressley I. Lancaster, Luke McDonald, Colonel Albert E. Castle, Johannes C. Berendsen, Peter J. Crosby and Willis S. Clayton. The meeting was presided over by W. F. Mixon of the Woodland Mail, who is also treasurer of the regular republican campaign committee.

The editors who attended were Joseph R. Knowland, Oakland Tribune; W. F. Mixon, Woodland Mail; S. D. Merk, Burlingame Advance; J. E. Olmstead, Petaluma Argus; George E. Kilpatrick, Gilroy Gazette; W. A. Rugg, Martinez Gazette; M. Earl Adams, Lakeport Bee; E. I. Woodman, South San Francisco Enterprise; S. H. Olmstead, San Rafael Journal; J. O. Hayes, San Jose Mercury-Herald; A. W. Gluckman, Marysville Democrat; Fred N. Loring, Willits News; D. E. O'Keefe, Redwood City Times-Gazette; M. F. Calkins, Monterey Cypress; W. L. Murphy, Sonoma Index-Tribune; Will Speegle, Humboldt Standard of Eureka, and J. Elmer Mobley, Santa Rosa Republican.

RETURNING TO REPUBLICAN PARTY.

W. T. Rutherford of the progressive state central committee, and for many years city attorney of Napa and one of the best-known members of the bar in central California, has just declared for the regular republican ticket.

"The progressive party is dead," said Rutherford. "Believing that many reforms were necessary in the old party I joined the progressive ranks, but now that the progressive party has outlived its usefulness and the republican party has worked out its own reforms, I am very glad to return to the old party and shall do all I can for the regular republican ticket."

"I am thoroughly convinced that only through the republican party can success and prosperity in this country be attained. We all look to this party for the security and safety of the nation in time of crisis."

"I believe that the regular republican ticket is the only real repre-

AS THE EDITOR SEES IT

Say, now, us editors sure do have just one hum-hum of a time. Here we are sweating icicles in a painful endeavor to grind out a grist of intellectual hash for your consumption, and when we spring this brilliant production upon you about the most illuminating commendation we'll receive will be a grunt. Speaking, however, to men only.

A few people go through this world on their brains, many slip by on their nerve, while a hellobunch just slide along in the other fellow's grease. But never mind your gun, for we diplomatically concede that you, individually, are of the first named, while we other mortals are humbly grasping at the frazzle end of the grease.

No, dear madam, it is no longer necessary to go through your husband's pockets while he slumbers—and snores. Just fill him up with a good breakfast, then tickle him gently under the chin, smooth the wrinkles from his furrowed brow, whisper in his ear that you heard a "dear little chicken" call him the handsomest of men, and he'll promptly shell out everything he owns except his false teeth and his vanity. It works with us, and it will with him.

We know a fellow who has been trying for many years to convince his wife that her judgment is at fault on even one minor subject. He has argued, pleaded, cajoled, cussed, stormed, raved and rampaged, but to no purpose. The Rock of Gibraltar is a pebble compared to that Amazonian will. But just as he was ready to give up the ghost in despair he hit upon the proper and only solution. He said it before she got a chance.

It May Not Be Easy to Make Out Income Tax Return, But It Is Necessary

The open season for income tax returns has ended. Some time between the 1st of January and the 1st of March this statement must be made by those subject to it. If the return is not made by that time, trouble and penalties begin.

The tax itself is not payable until June, and a penalty is added if it is not paid by July 10th. The government usually send a notice to the taxpayer to pay the tax and avoid the penalty. But this is an act of grace and not necessity, and failure to give or receive the notice is not an excuse and does not avoid the penalty.

There are at least three reasons why one should prepare his return with care and accuracy—because it will insure peace of mind; because his country really needs his full contribution to the support of necessary national institutions, and because if one does make a fraudulent report he will be found out and punished.

And any one of these three reasons is sufficient; but collectively they are overwhelming. Some folks ignorantly omit to do their duty or fatuously believe that it is worth while, for the small sum withheld, to attempt a petty deception, trusting to luck to get out of their troubles when or if they are caught.

Evaders Sure to Be Caught.

The treasury department, through the internal revenue bureau, charged with collecting the income tax, which is relatively light and borne by those best able to meet it, is decidedly of the opinion that any one attempting to practice concealment or misrepresentation will fall into a net, and the more he wiggles to get out the more securely will he be enmeshed.

"During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915," said Samuel H. Boyd, chief of the personal income tax division, "we have collected over $41,000,000 from 357,515 people.

The returns are all examined critically in the treasury department, for many are inaccurate, some through mistake and some through intention, and there are numerous attempts to evade the tax by making no return whatever where one ought to be made."

The holding of the department that all gains in stock transactions must upon sale of the stock be counted as an increase of income, while a corresponding loss upon a similar transaction may not be taken as an offset or a deduction from the income, has helped to dull many a conscience into a complacent view of some questionable statements in the tax return. It does seem a rather hard view of the situation, but one which the secretary, who is an administrative, not a judicial officer, was advised he must take under the language of the act, leaving the judicial decision to the United States courts.

Speculators Must Pay, Too.

The man who was fortunate enough to buy a "war bride" must pay a tax on his winnings, but if at the same time trying another venture he missed his guess and purchased a high-grade industrial which has so depreciated, owing to foreign conditions, that he must sell at a lower price, he cannot deduct this loss from his profits—not when it comes to making an income tax return to the treasury department.

Perhaps the courts, in the cases now pending, will hold that he may make the deduction, but in the meantime the man who does want to deal fairly and have not trouble, but does not want to pay the money, has a lovely little argument in applied morality, wherein he is both judge and jury.

He knows that the losses in some stocks have played the mischief with his profits in the "war brides," and so he argues to himself, usually to his satisfaction, that if he had to pay an income tax he should pay it only on his net income, and he renders decision accordingly. But to accomplish this he must make an income tax return, and if that contains truthful statements—and it must be sworn to—he will have to pay on all his profit, and since that is what he does not want to do, and feels perhaps that he is not morally required to do, he is tempted to make a return which is true only in some respects.

There is the time to pause, for if one does not, some time in the future, when he has almost forgotten his little irregularity he may—perhaps at the very time he is starting for prayer meeting, or a poker party, for he is found in all classes—receive a visit from a polite but insistent man who will remind him of the incongruities in the return, and blandly ask how the mistakes happened.

It is awkward to have to make the explanation, and the explanation is usually awkward, too. The revenue agent is certain to ask the name of the broker who carried the deal, and if one says he forgets the broker's name, the treasury agent will not believe him and will persist until he finds out. But if one does tell who purchased the stock the persistent man proceeds to summon the broker to appear in court with his books to tell all he knows and what the books show about the transaction.

Severe Are the Penalties.

Then the tax dodger stands liable to pay the undeclared tax 100 per cent penalty, perhaps a fine, and to stand trial on a charge of perjury. Aside from any more serious or worthy feeling, he is inclined to kick himself for having taken such a risk to save so little money.

Another class of man who is liable to get into trouble is the man who, quite out of his usual business, has made a considerable fortune, either by a speculation, an unprecedented business condition or some unexpected commission. He, since he does not intend to spend his windfall, but to invest it so as to receive rents, interest or coupons, does not regard it as income, but as principal.

Unfortunately, the treasury department views this from a wholly different angle, and holds it to be money which was earned and may be used during the year, and therefore income and taxable. So the lucky man is quite prone to fix his return a little bit, forgetting that it costs money to pay pensions, maintain courts of justice, postoffices, armies and navies and field agents and inspectors to look after income tax dodgers.

But it will be much better for him to make his return and pay while he has the money his part of the billion dollars or so required to run the government—two-thirds of it, by the way, for pensions, army and navy—than to make a false return and long after to pay double the amount of tax when perhaps all the easy money is spent.

The department has taken the position that the returns must be made in accordance with the law, but on account of the newness of the law, the unfamiliarity of the people at large with the practical operation of the act, has induced the department to deal leniently in enforcing the specific penalty of $20 to $1000 for failure to make returns.

It comes down to the old problem of internal revenue collections—correcting the mistakes of the honest and detecting the sins of omission and commission by those who willfully withhold their fair contribution to the support of that government, and, for the sake of future regularity, imposing penalties upon those who indulge in the fraudulent practice of making false returns.

Where Figures Lie a Little.

Some business men, from the statements in their returns, seemingly take a greatly exaggerated view of the annual depreciation of their plants, and resort to curious book-keeping devices to show diminished profits. Some of our agricultural population prove their fitness to enter the ranks of the wicked business world by the way they demonstrate with an old pencil stub and a few figures that their crops have been failures and their expenses so high that they have had to buy automobiles to offset the shock to their nerves.

The income tax returns show little difference from the viewpoint of the moralist in the attitude of the wealthy and of those who are at the bottom of the tax scale.

Some of the plutocrats—the men who pay an annual income of $500,000 or more—make returns which will bear the most rigid investigation. Some even add, although under no obligation, that they have certain other sources of income which they have been advised are not liable to taxation; but mention the fact that the collector may examine the matter, and, if he thinks best, seek an adjudication. Others in the same class as to wealth find it difficult to part with any of it in the shape of revenue to the government; and their statements are prepared with such skill that they will stand any scrutiny; but the facts of the case when investigated by some of the quiet revenue men of persisting powers of observation are found not to agree with facts set forth in the tax statement, and then there is trouble.

There is another class of persons which has an easier way—a negative way—of getting out of its income tax troubles. These people are the "br'er rabbits who lay low and say nuffin'" who claims to have net incomes of less than $3000, the minimum taxable amount.

Often Goes Undetected.

The law, as it stands, does not require them to make a tax statement; and it is so easy to expand and exaggerate a little the amounts which they deduct from the gross income that they conclude that no report is necessary, and so there is none for the revenue officers on behalf of the tax gatherers to examine. Consequently, unless the difference is very glaring, it goes undetected.

Although each amount is small, the number of these offenses is so great that the probable total loss of revenue is such that the department has recommended a very simple remedy, suggested by experience, and that is to require every one having a gross income of over $3000 to make a tax statement and to set forth under oath the deductions which he claims.

Another proposed amendment which will make for efficiency is to do away with the collection of revenue at its source, but to provide reporting information at the source of each taxable payment made. The department armed with that information can easily make the collection.

The change will result in a great simplification of the cash transactions and bookkeeping for the parties, and the requirement that the payee must file a statement which may lead to a proper declaration of all his income, consisting of rents, interest from mortgages and other sources of investment, will doubtless produce more revenue.

But in the interest of the government and of all honest taxpayers the treasury department was bound to create a system by which tax returns must be made by all in such a way as to effectuate the requirements of the income tax law.

The department had no precedents and the commissioner of revenue had to install the administrative machinery. He placed at the head of the income tax division Mr. Boyd, who has really created the comprehensive but simple system.

Where Mistakes Never Happen.

The deadly card index is the basis of its working. In the card record room in the treasury building—a room 140 feet long—are many filing cabinets, sufficient to hold a million cards and now containing more than 360,000 of them, one for each person on the tax list, and then some more cards for the name of those who, it is thought, should be on the list. Each card is really a record of a personal account between the individual and the revenue department.

There the chief of the division can in a few moments ascertain whether a tax return has been audited and passed; what letters and notices have been sent or received; what action has been taken in the case, or whether the matter has been referred to the mysterious "field service," made up of trained investigators, who dispassionately and impersonally report what they find.

Forty-eight employees are required to tabulate and keep these cards up to date, and each card will be continued until the account is closed by death or disappearance of the individual.

Near the card record room is the audit section. Here a body of eleven picked and carefully trained men inspect each of the 350,000 returns and right there have found on their face errors which, when pointed out to him, the individual has corrected and then settled the account on the new and correct basis. Rare instances have been found where the individual has made an error against his own interest, in which case he is informed with the same care token to notify those who err the other way.

A system of card indices shows the daily work of each of these auditors, and also that the body is securing many sums for the treasury, at a cost of about 14 per cent of the amount recovered. When a statement is approved, it is so reported, when disapproved the offender is politely requested to explain. If the explanation is unsatisfactory, the case is usually referred to the field force for investigation or perhaps to the district attorney for his consideration.

The auditing force from its experience can tell many things on a brief inspection of a return. They know the average percentage of profit in nearly every line of business, and a glance tells whether an unusual deduction has been made. They know what the proper office expenses for the average lawyer, doctor, engineer or architect should be and whether the statement is reasonable. Every week this body discusses the problems which have vexed them, and thus they are of mutual aid.

There is also a room for correspondence files where reports of collectors, letters and all papers are so kept and indexed by the file clerks that each subject can be found with remarkable promptness.

Millions of Certificates.

In another room is the withholding return section, where all corporations or others must make returns of all amounts withheld under the act. Millions of these certificates, numbered, indexed and tied in even parcels, are piled away most carefully and exactly, easily found, if needed, to verify or disprove some question under dispute.

Little can be said of the operations of the field force—the agents, investigator, inspectors, on whose faithfulness and ability the success of rounding up the income tax dodgers depends. How well their work has been done, however, may be judged by this official announcement:

"The total number of agents' reports of examinations of personal returns for the months of June, July, August and September shows that 63 per cent of their returns indicated that an additional average tax of $150.07 was due to the government on each return."

Oddly enough, agents' reports of examined tax returns of corporations, which have no souls, shows exactly the same percentage of returns as this made by persons supposed to have souls and to keep them in order.

As it is by no means to be assumed that all the cases referred to the agents involve false returns, the high percentage of successful results shows their efficiency; and the great excess of their recoveries over the cost of their maintenance establishes an economic value for the force. Its real value as a discourager of hesitancy to making full and proper returns cannot be calculated.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The city board of trustees met in regular session in the city hall last Monday evening.

Trustee Kelley introduced a resolution canvassing the returns of the votes cast at the municipal election held on April 10, 1916, which declared the following elected as city officials:

City trustees—G. W. Holston, J. H. Kelley and M. F. Healy; city clerk, W. J. Smith; city treasurer, E. P. Kauffmann.

The proposition of paying each city trustee a salary of $15 a month was also declared carried.

The resolution was adopted.

Former Trustee J. C. McGovern welcomed City Trustee-elect M. F. Healy, who took his seat as a member of the board.

Trustee G. W. Holston was selected as temporary chairman of the board, who gave way to Trustee J. H. Kelley, who was selected as permanent chairman.

President Kelley thanked the board for the honor conferred upon him.

A petition was received from Dr. J. C. McGovern, former trustee of the board, making application for the appointment of health officer.

A petition signed by several citizens and members of the Woman's Club, asking the board to appoint Mrs. Ellen Smith for the same position, was also presented.

Mrs. Marianne Martin, president of the Woman's Club, addressed the board, saying a few words commendatory of Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Smith also made a short address, giving her experience as a nurse and stating that considerable improvement could be made in the health and sanitary conditions of this city.

Mrs. Smith was followed with a few remarks by Dr. McGovern, who stated what his plans would be if appointed.

On a vote being taken, Dr. McGovern was unanimously elected.

Charles Mercks presented an application for the appointment of night watchman.

There being no vacancy, the application was ordered filed.

A petition was received from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for permission to place poles on Armour and Railroad avenues.

Referred to City Engineer Kneese.

W. J. Martin appeared before the board and stated that the matter of right of way privileges between the Flood Estate and the United Railroads, so that the suburban electric line could be connected with the local electric railroad, would be settled the next day (Tuesday).

This means that the electric railroad will be built along the new Grand avenue extension, and a direct connection be made from this city north or south along the suburban electric road.

Ex-Recorder Rehberg presented his final report for the first half of April, which showed that he had disposed of one misdemeanor case and had collected $5 in fines, which he had turned over to Recorder J. J. Dowd, who was appointed to the position by the board at the adjourned meeting held last Saturday, after The Enterprise went to press.

Bonds for $2000 for Clerk Smith and $2500 for Tax Collector Kneese were accepted and approved.

The following trustees were appointed on various committees by President Kelley, as follows:

Street—Trustees G. W. Holston (chairman), M. F. Healy, F. A. Cunningham.

Purchasing—Trustees G. H. Wallace (chairman), M. F. Healy, G. W. Holston.

Finance—Trustees F. A. Cunningham (chairman), G. H. Wallace, G. W. Holston.

Public Utilities—M. F. Healy (chairman), G. H. Wallace, G. W. Holston.

Trustee Healy suggested that the board should have a man constantly at work keeping the streets clean.

A resolution expressing appreciation of the valuable work Dr. J. C. McGovern had done for the city while a member of the board, was adopted, as follows:

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION

The board of governors of the San Mateo county development association held the annual election of officers last Tuesday night in San Mateo and unanimously re-elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year:

M. B. Johnson of Montara, president; Asa Hull, San Carlos, vice-president; S. D. Merk, Burlingame, treasurer; F. L. Eksward, San Mateo, secretary.

Representatives from as far north as Daly City, as far west as Montara and as far south as Redwood City were on hand to cast their vote in the annual election of the association.

The association's progress in the past year, the governors believed, indicated that the administrative officers at the helm should again hold sway for the coming year.

A number of matters of important county-wide scope were discussed thoroughly by the governors, who were enthusiastically inclined about the prosperity that is due to greet the Peninsula.

The construction of perfect highways and the ever-increasing methods of handling transportation are sure indications that the county's friends are constantly multiplying in great numbers.

By co-operating with various outside civic bodies, the development association is in a position where it constantly advertises San Mateo county's merits, not only throughout the state of California, but throughout the entire United States.

The county is now to reap the benefits of the work done in advertising during the exposition year.

CALIFORNIA SPEEDWAY ASSOCIATION INCORPORATES FOR ONE MILLION

With the incorporation this week of the California speedway association for one million dollars and the filing of papers in the county clerk's office and at Sacramento, assurance has been given the motorists and general public of San Francisco and central California that this long-desired public racing concourse will soon be turned from mere plans on paper into a living reality.

With the practically unanimous support of the motor car dealers of San Francisco behind them, in addition to the co-operation of a number of the city's prominent business and professional men, the directors and officials of the new speedway association state that it is now only a matter of a short time before they will be in a position to start actual construction work on the splendid one-mile concrete track, the grandstands, bleachers, etc., that will be erected on the speedway site.

McDonald & Kahn, prominent engineers of San Francisco, are now engaged in the preliminary work of getting the tentative plans for the new speedway into shape. This firm has to its credit the planning and building of Syracuse's $500,000 stadium, a project that in many respects resembles the plans of San Francisco's new race concourse.

One of the most important features of the new speedway will be the facilities that will be provided the motorizing and general public in the way of transportation to and from the track. Both electric street car and train transportation will be convenient and ample to handle all crowds on days when racing meets are held; in addition, broad, well-kept highways will lead direct to the race course.

Nat T. Messer, the secretary of the California speedway association, and Ivan R. Gates, the manager, state that the enthusiastic reception the project is receiving from all lines of business and all classes of people shows that there is a well-defined need for just such an institution in San Francisco. Inquiries for information have been received from many parts of California, indicating the widespread interest in the speedway idea all over the state.

Miss A. Vandebos, graduate of the Conservatory of Music in Brussels, will give music lessons on the piano and harp at Linden Hotel. Lessons $1. Advt.
